Additions For Gas Plant Here

P. G. & E. to Spend Large Sum in District

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company's budget for additions and betterments to plants in the San Jose division involves an expenditure of $2,505,540.00.

The major items of expenditure in the Gas Department are $37,600 for the San Jose gas plant; $292,180 for new mains and additional distribution facilities in San Jose; $25,000 of which is for the installation of a 100,000 cubic foot high presure holder at Los Gatos. It is estimated that 1,850 new services will be installed in San Jose. In the Redwood City district it is estimated 1,500 services will be installed; $564,200 is to be expended for additions to the upper peninsula distribution system. Of this item $350,000 for the installation of 11 miles of 16 inch high pressure main from the Potrero gas lant at San Francisco to San Bruno. 80,000 feet of new main will be laid at East San Mateo to provide additonal and better service facilities in that section.

J. D. Kuster, division manager, states. "All sections served by the company show a substantial growth during the past year. This is indicated by a gain of 15,033 gas consumers and 21,801 electric consumers. The company is now serving 967,717 electric consumers.

"The use of gas increased 2,015,790,700 feet sold or a gain of 11.08%. In electric sales the largest increases were shown among the domestic consumers, whose usage increased 14.78%. In this group the usage increased 32.64%.

"New rate reductions to be made will result in a saving of $1,600,000 to the customers and the new schedules are designed to assist and encourage lighting consumers to make more extensive use of electricity for heating and cooking."

Halcrow. The paper is an interesting and readable little sheet and desreves the support of the citizens of the growing community which it is intended to serve.

Halcrow, the editor and publisher, is well known in this city, where he has resided for several years, and where he has taken an active interest in Boy Scout work. He was formerly connected with the Record in Daly City. His many friends in Redwood City wish him success in his new venture.

Body Discovered Near Daly City

Murder Mystery May Involve Booze Business

The finding of the body of Fred Bettoni riddled with bullets, at a lonely spot near Daly City Sunday by Nicholas Milesky of San Francisco may it is thought, result in a general investigation of conditions in the bay district.

Bettoni is believed to have been shot in a rum runner war, supposedly brought about by the capture of the rum boat at Pittsburg, California, by federal officers. Bettoni is known to have had an interest of $925 in the Elma, one of the boats captured. Also it is reported that Bettoni was a partner of Rubio Pane, now being sought by the police for his rum running activities, to whom Bettoni is said to have loaned large sums of money which he was unable to collect.

An inquest was held at Daly City Monday but little evidence was brought out which might indicate the identity of the slayer. The verdict of the jury was that "the deceased came to his death at the hands of ersons unknown."

Persistent rumors that friends of the dead man know who was responsible for the shooting and plan to retaliate in kind have caused authorities throughout the bay district to be on guard for further developments in the rum war.

Fuller has been in the drug business in San Francisco for the past ten years, but having recenty sold out there, plans to live in Redwood City and devote his attention to the local store. In the store with Fuller is John M. Cals, a registered pharmacist. Mr. and Mrs. Cals are newlyweds and will also make their home in Redwood City.

Local Cleaning Firm Joins Association

The New Method Cleaning and Dyeing Company of this city has been notified of its election to membership in the National Association of Cleaners and Dyers. This is a peculiar distinction, E. Hecht, proprietor of the local company states, as his is the only firm in the county to which this privilege has been accorded.

The National Association demands that any firm in order to receive membership must have a strictly up-to-date shop, be able to turn out the highest grade of work and hold an established plce in the community. The convention at which the New Method concern was elected to membership was held in Washington, D. C. during January.

Big Developments Seen For County's Bay Shore

With several projects in the offing, involving millions of dollars and years of labor, the prospects for the development of the industrial land along the bay side of the peninsula and of the bay harbor in this county is perhaps without an equal in any other locality.

Coyote Point Bridge

One of the prominent features of this development is now under way, the construction of a trans bay bridge from Little Coyote point in this county to Mt. Eden in Alameda county. Work on the approaches and pier heads is being rushed to completion by the Dutton Dredging Co., which has the contract for the dredging work.

The leasing of the California Iron Works in San Francisco by the New York Foundation Co., which has the contract for the erection of the superstructure of the bridge was announced this week. The New York concern has taken a ten months lease on the iron works and will build the sections of the bridge there. The bridge when completed will be eleven miles in length and will cost $7,000,000. It will form with the recently completed Dumbarton bridge, an important link in the highway system of the bay area.

Port San Francisco

Announcements with importance with reference to the Port San Francisco project, which will involve the development of marsh land between this city and Belmont have also been made this week.

The whole program contemplates a complete industrial center with extensive wharf and railroad facilities and sites for factories and wrehouses, together with an exclusive residential section capable of offering proper homes for business men and office attaches who will be brought to this section by the new enterprise.

Negotiations have been concluded with the United Dredging company, an organization of national scope, to take over the project of construction of the waterway and the other industrial features of the enterprise. In addition to the $100,000 already expended in development, an additional $250,000 will be spent immediately to push the work.

A contract has been let to the Peninsula Paving Company which calls for an expenditure of $200,000 for immediate improvement program of the Bay View Heights subdivision located on El Camino Real and adjoining Belmont on the south.

The industrial property acquired comprises an area of over 4000 acres lying between Belmont and Redwood City and extending from the Southern Pacific Railroad to the bay. The immediate work provides for the dredging of a channel from the deep water of San Francisco bay into the property, the dredging of slips and turning basins, and the filling in of an area of marsh land for the location of industrial plants.

At the same time a roadway is to be contructed to carry a railroad and a highway from Bay Shore highway to the end of the property on the bay front, a distance of about two miles.

Two industries of importance will begin construction work in the near future on the terminal property, it is stated, now that the future of the development has become assured by reason of the United Dredging Company and its associates having taken over a cotnrolling interest in the project and having agreed to put back of it their capital and experience in harbor and port development.

Work on the construction of the new Bay Shore highway through the properties of Port San Francisco has been in progress for some time.

The terminal plan contemplates several units, the first of which now under construction, will consist of 1000 acres of industrial land exclusive of waterways, railroad and highway and served by 50,000 linear feet of wharf frontage, with a thirty foot depth of water. No part of this unit will be more than 1100 feet from deep water and every acre will be served by rail and highway in addition to the waterway facilities.

Local Developments Planned

A development as great as that of the Port San Francisco project is expected to be announced for the lower part of the bay very shortly including a large section of the industrial land in the immediate vicinity of this city.

Federal Assistance

An important announcement in connection with the development of the harbor resources of the county was made Wednesday by the board of engineers of the War Department. This was the approval of the engineers of the plan proposed by Congressman Walsh of San Francisco for the establishment of pier head and bulkhead lines in this county from Hunters Point in the north to Ravenswood Point in the south.

The project was approved by Brigadier-General Deakyne, assistant army engineer. Deakyne stated that legislation by congress would be unnecessary as the board of engineers could proceed with the work without action by that body.

The resolution by Walsh to have a survey made of the district and the bulkhead lines established by the engineers has received the suport of the board of supervisors of this and San Francisco counties and of the chambers of commerce and development clubs of the bay region. Securing this assistance from the federal government is considered a big step in the development of the bay frontage of this county.

Atherton Burglars Begin Prison Term

Joe Aquino and Salvadore Silverstrucci this week changed their residence from this city and have taken up permanent apartments in San Quentin. The pair were sentenced to indeterminate terms at the state prison by Judge Buck Saturday on charges of burglary.

Silverstrucci and Aquino were arrested and more than $80,000 worth of stolen goods seized. The former, who was found in San Francisco at the apartment where the goods were stored, plead guilty to the charge. Aquino, arrested at Atherton, where the pair were preparing to remove valuables from the Jouve residences, entered a plea of not guilty. He was tried and found guilty.

Practically all of the goods found in the apartments in San Francisco were identified last week and returned to the rightful owners.

Telephone Rates Reduced in South End of County

Telephone rates in Menlo Park, Ravenswood, East Palo Alto, North Palo Alto and part of Atherton will be reduced as the result of action taken by the State Railroad Commission this week. The action by the railroad commission was taken following the filing of a complaint by A. Groves, president of the Ravenswood chamber of commerce.

Telephone subscribers in the above section had been charged at a rate higher than that charged to subscribers within the city of Palo Alto. All of these sections are served from the Palo Alto exchange, and all on the north side of the San Francisquito creek were paying a rural rate. The rate now to be made effective is the same as the base rate charged in the Palo Alto exchange.

Civil War Veteran Laid to Rest Here

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the chapel of Layng & Tinney for Joseph Ridge, G. A. R. veteran, who passed away Sunday at the home of his son, Walter Ridge in Oak Knoll Manor. The services were conducted by Rev. C. E. Winning, pastor of the Methodist church of this city, and was attended by members of General Geo. S. Evans Relief Corps and by Redwood Post American Legion.

The deceased was a native of England and was 90 years of age. He came to this country when 10 years of age, and during the whole period of the civil war was a member of the Union army.

In addition to the son, Walter Ridge of this city, the deceased is survived by two sons, George W., and Wyne L. Ridge of Anoka, Minn., and by three daughters, Mrs. Eva McKeen of Minneapolis, Miss L. Ridge of Boise, Idaho, and Mrs Addie Woods of Boise.

Atherton Board For Clean Streets

Dumpers of Garbage Threatened with Arrest

The board of trustees of Atherton are determined that the streets and avenues of that city will be maintained clean and free from unsightly waste. Action toward this end was taken by the city board Tuesday when the entire police force was ordered to keep a vigalant watch for any one dumping garbage alongside of the Atherton roadways. Mayor Harris reported that one offender had been caught and had been fined $25.

V. Arata, who has a contract for cleaning the streets was present at the meeting, but reportod that his efforts were not altogether successful, as some people made a practice of throwing sacks of tin cans and garbage off automobiles along side of the roads. This report resulted in the board's orders to the police department.

The police will also keep a watch on the refreshment stands operating along the highway, and anyone found throwing papers and other rubbish onto the streets will be cited to appear in the recorder's court.

San Mateo-Burlingame Vote Special School Tax

Raising the school tax from 30 cents to 38 cents, the citizens of the San Mateo and Burlingame high school districts on Monday passed a special tax by vote of four to one. The votes showed that 3647 people had voted for the tax and 913 had voted against it. In every precinct the tax carried by substantially the same majority.

The passage of the tax relieves the tension which has resulted from the discovery of a shortage of $80,000 in the finances of the district. When the shortage was made public it was feared that the schools of the district would be closed.

Citizens of the district are now considering action which would result in the removal from office of the remaining members of the board of trustees of the school district. The clerk, Frank Thrall, tendered his resignation last week, but the remaining members have so far stood fast in their refusal to do likewise. It is also possible that the position of supervising principal held by W. L. Glascock, resigned, might be abolished. This move, it is estimated, would save the district an expense of $7500 a year.

Deputy Now Aiding In Tax Statements

uus Risso, deputy colector of internal revenue, who has been stationed at several places in the county during the past two weeks to assist income tax payers to fill out reports will be at the courthouse here today and on Monday and Tuesday.

MASONS ENJOY PROGRAM; AVIATION TALKS HEARD

Cost of Work To be Lower

Broadway Extension Assessments Complete

The work of the committee which has been working out a scheme of assessments for the district involved in the extension of Broadway, has completed its work, and will have a report ready to file with the board of trustees Monday evening.

The assessments will be considerably less than was at first expected, it is stated. It was originally thought that $60,000 would have to be raised by an assessment district, but the committee has been able to reduce the cost of the improvement to $63,000 of which $30,000 has already been secured by means of a bond issue. This will leave only $33,000 to be raised by assessment.

The committee consisting of E. B. Fox, L. A. Heiner and W. T. Kellogg has worked out a plan of assessment which will be considered by the board Monday night. A date for hearing protests will then be set, at which time anyone having a valid protest may be heard. Following this date the assessments may be paid in cash or may be allowed to go to bonds in which case the amount will be divided over a period of years and paid with the town taxes.

As soon as these formalities have been complied with the board of trustees plans to rush work on the actual extension of the street. Work on this project will be started early this spring. A number of improvements by owners of property in the rear of Main street are now being planned but are awaiting the extension of Broadway.

Local Bank Installs New Vault Protection

In an interview with Mr. Harrison, cashier of the First National Bank of this city, he expressed the following views of the officers regarding vaults:

"The vital part of a bank is its vaults. Therein are stored not only the records and monies of the bank itself, but also the valuable possessions of safe deposit box customers, which we consider more important than the bank's cash. Therefore, in the planning and construction of our new protection equipment every consideration has been given to the safety and security of our vaults.

"Not satisfied with thick walls and heavy entrances, a contract has just been made with the C. B. McClintock Company, the largest bank vault burglar alarm manuacturers in the world, to electrically protect our vaults.

"The entire surface of the walls ceiling and floor are to be surrounded with electrically sensitive protection. The vault doors are protected against attack of any kind.

"Automatic supervision provides a strict check-up on the officials of our bank so that at no time could our vaults be left for the night without being perfectly and properly safe-guarded.

"Any attack made on the vaults of this bank will immediately cause an alarm from the heavy gong installed in its electrically protected housing on the outside of the building—any attempt to destroy or silence this big gong will at once cause the alarm to sound.

The officers and directors of the First National Bank are to be commended for their high regard of their responsibilities and for thelength to which they have gone in providing the very utmost in vault protection.

Committees to arrange plans for graduation and senior week at Sequoia Union High School have been appointed by Lorin Denney, senior class president.

Plans for senior week have been left to a committee whose chairman is Bill Kellogg. They are to make a definite program for the last week in school, the first edition of which was started by the class of 1927. This committee is especially interested in an enlarged class day, which will include the placing of the class numerals in the front sidewalk, and the exercises in the auditorium.

Correspondence Subject of Club Talk Wednesday

W. J. Mara, manager of correspondence for the Bank of Italy, was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday noon at the Parish House. Mara, who has charge of the correspondence for the whole Bank of Italy organization, and instructs the employees of the big concern in the art of writing letters, made what first thought might be considered an uninteresting subject, a very interesting one.

The speaker was secured for the club by Carl Wagner, manager of the local branch of the bank. Amerigo Rossi, manager of the savings department of the same bank, was chairman of the meeting.

Among the guests was Private Peat, well-known Canadian war hero, who had been speaking at the Sequoia High School. He accompanied A. C. Argo to the Kiwanis meeting.

Golden State
News of Interest to All

The 1928 convention of the California Real Estate Association will be held in Sacramento, according to an announcement by Glenn D. Williaman, association secretary. The meeting has been set for the week of October 8 to 12.

Unless you submit proof that you have filed your application for 1928 automobile license plates you now are subject to having your car impounded until you have forwarded your application and double fee required—if you still are using 1927 plates. This is the announcement by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, who has notified traffic officers to stop every car still carrying 1927 plates.

The California Congress of Religious Education will meet in San Francisco March 18 to 20. Some of the meetings will be held in Native Sons' hall, and others in the First Congregation church. Dr. Herman F. Swartz, president of the Pacific School of Religion, will preside. Dr. Miles Fisher, associate pastor of the First Congregational church of Berkeley, is secretary in charge of arrangements.

Bureaus of the State division of Motor Vehicles for convenience of tourists and law enforcement are to be established immediately at all border points where interstate highways enter California, it was announced a few days ago by Frank G. Snook, division chief. This step for better service to tourists in California was taken, following a conference at the last meeting of Governor C. C. Young's cabinet, on instructions given Snook by Alexander R. Heron, State director of finance.

The weirdest verdict in the history of California jurisprudence was handed down one day last week in the case of the six convicts charged with the murder of Ray Singleon, Folsom guard, slain during the Thanksgiving riot. The jury found all six men guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed the penalty as life imprisonment.

Actual construction work upon the North Fork highway, authorized last week by the California highway commission, will be under way by July 1, with convict camps established at each end of the road, Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, announced a few days ago. Location survey parties will be placed in the field at once, he said. The two convict camps will contain approximately 160 men. Initial construction costs and expenditures for equipment will be made from the third State highway bond issued of $40,000,000.

Gov. Hartley of Olympia, Wash., believes the State of California sends too many officers to Washington to bring back its escaped criminals. During a Capitol committee meeting last week extradition papers were brought in for the Governor to approve. "They've got three big huskies out there in front to take back two little fellows to California," he told the committee members. "Those fellows like to travel. There is a steady traffic between here and there. It's a poor day if we don't have one. Our parole officer brought back seven men from California, and they need three big fellows to take two little chaps back.

Seeking to recover $115,931.40 in taxes which it contends was paid to the State under protest, the Anglo and London-Paris National Bank last week filed suit for that amount against State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson in Superior Court. The action followed 24 hours after an identical suit had been filed by the Bank of Italy National Trust Saving Association for $355,386.80 in protested taxes. As in the Bank of Italy suit, that registered last week contended that because the complainant bank is a national one, a state cannot subject it to taxes unless given permission by Congress to do so.

Public utility corporations, farm bloc leaders, business representatives and all other Californians interested in tax matters will be given an opportunity to present their views on readjustment of the State taxation system at four public hearings to be conducted by the State Tax Commission within the next month Irving Martin, commission president, announced the hearing as follows: Sacramento Valley and Northern California hearing, at Sacramento, March 1 and 3, or longer is necessary Central California and San Francisco Metropolitan Area hearing, at San Francisco, March 6th, through 10th, if necessary. San Joaquin Valley hearing, at Fresno, March 12. Southern California and Los Angeles District hearing, at Los Angeles, March 13 through 17 if necessary.

California's timber, brush, grass and grain fire losses for 1927 totaled $1,133,244, according to a joint report issued a few days ago by State Forester M. B. Pratt and United States District Forester S. B. Show. The total is based on reports from Federal, State, county and private fire rangers. The loss was distributed as follows: State-protected area, $574,529; national forests guarded by the forest service, $133,210; districts protected by counties and associations under co-operative agreements, $314,938; other co-operative agencies, $308; unprotected areas, $110,257.

Another milestone along the highway of good will between the United States and Mexico will be reached in San Diego March 13th, when Governor Young of California and Governor Rodriguez of Lower California are to meet at San Diego in the interest of national amity. Definite word from both executives was received last week by the chamber of commerce at San Diego, and definite plans are being formulated to make that "D a de las California" (Day of the Californias), on March 13th, one of the most colorful and impressive in the history of both nations.

Declaring that the narcotic drug evil is a "constant and serious menace to the social institutions of our State," Governor C. C. Young a few days ago issued a formal statement in which he urged Californians everywhere to unite in the campaign against traffickers in habit-forming drugs. Strict enforcement of the anti-narcotic laws was stressed by Governor Young as imperative, and the need of widespread education on the danger of narcotics was equally emphasized by the executive.

The State Agricultural Society last week voted to reiterate its former stand, taken in 1915, against the holding of automobile races on the mile dirt track at the State fairgrounds at Sacramento. The action was taken last week in view of a movement to hold racing at the track soon, as sponsored by Los Angeles promoters.

The commission recently appointed by Governor C. C. Young to plan a new State penitentiary for women offenders will recommend that the institution be located in southern California if a suitable site can be found, it was announced last week by Mrs. Ernest Wallace of Alhambra, chairman.

Only the four regularly qualified California political organizations, the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Prohibition parties, will be represented on the May presidential primary ballot. February 16 was the last day for the filing of petitions with the secretary of state in qualification of new parties.

A California delegation of approximately 100 educators, headed by Joseph M. Gwinn, superintendent of San Francisco schools, left Los Angeles last week for the annual convention of the department of superintendence, National Education Association, in Boston, February 26 through March 1. The convention will be opened by Superintendent Gwinn as national president of the department of superintendence.

An endowment to the University of California even larger than the million dollar Giannini endowment recently given to the university may be announced on Charter Day, Dean E. H. Merrill of the College of Agriculture declared at a banquet given at Davis last week. President W. W. Campbell, of the University of California, declined to discuss the reported gift in any way and would give no hint as to its source.

Black powder and dynamite sounded the symphony of progress at San Mateo last week when several thousand tons of rock were blown skyward in the first blasting of Little Coyote Point, the site of the San Mateo approach of the proposed bay bridge from San Mateo to Alameda county. The proposed span will be seven and a half miles long. It will extend from Little Coyote Point across the bay to Mt. Eden in Alameda county. It will be known as Little Coyote Point bridge, being named after that famous San Mateo county landmark.

Under a ruling handed down a few days ago by Attorney General U. S. Webb, Northern California counties will receive a million dollars more for highway maintenance than had been expected. The ruling, handed down at request of Director of Public Works B. B. Meek, supports Meek's contention that allocation of highway funds should be made under the Breed allocation law instead of the budget act.

B. B. Meek, State Director of Public Works, last week announced the appointment of Evan R. Higgins as chief accountant of the State Department of Public Works, a move that consolidates the accounting of all divisions of the department. Higgins succeeds William Schleip, chief accountant of the division of highways, who resigned to become an examiner for the State Insurance Commission. Higgins has been connected with the accounting division and the State Department of Finance, and was first on the chief accountant civil service list.

Robert M. Haig, tax expert of the state tax commission was in Sacramento last week getting acquainted with state fiscal officials prior to launching into his task of probing the state system of taxation and revenue. Announcement was made by Irving Martin, chairman of the commission, that Lester S. Ready, former chief engineer of the state railroad commission, and now engaged in the commissioner's telephone rate investigation, will assist Haig in studying taxation of utilities.

The body found on the beach at Ventura last week, and believed to be that of one of the missing Dole flight aviators was identified as that of Henry Froelich of Honolulu, who had been twice buried at sea. Deputy Sheriffs identified the remains by a necktie, the only article of clothing left, and by three scars. According to records in the Sheriff's office, Froelich died at sea en route from Havana to Honolulu, abroad a Panama-Pacific liner.

A complete survey of the economic conditions which prevailed in California during 1927, prepared by the research department of the California Development Association, showed that California not only carried on her business during the past year along the lines of continued prosperity, but that "at the beginning of 1928 the situation of basic California industries was sound, financial and credit conditions were good and the outlook was for normal or greater than normal business activity during the first six months of 1928."

The growing magnitude of the registration of motor vehicles of all kinds in California—a grand total of 1,736,765—during 1927 is shown in a statement of registration of vehicles by counties issued last week by the State motor vehicle department. The registration is an increase of 95,214 over the figure for 1926. The year's registration of vehicles was divided as follows: Passenger cars, 1,479,411; solid trucks, 38,114; pneumatic trucks, 175,670; motor-cycles, 9,444; trailers, 34,126. Los Angeles was first with 601,637, and San Francisco second with 114,122.

First All-Metal Dirigible Being Built in California

Workmen at Glendale, Calif., laying the aluminum-alloy shell on the steel framework of the first all-metal dirigible to be built. It will be powered by steam turbines. The ship will not need mooring masts or landing fields, because the "blower system" of the turbines will keep it stationary while a cable is lowered to a roof or the ground. The 40 passengers will descend down the cable in an elevator. The air-liner is the design of Capt. T. B. Slate, whose portrait is inserted.

Billie Brownie and the Deer Family

Bedtime Story for Children

BILLIE BROWNIE loved to go and see the creatures in the zoo. Nothing delighted him more.

So the other day he planned to go and call on some of the members of the Deer family and others in their neighborhood.

First of all he called on the white-tailed deer. Mr. White-Tailed Deer was looking his best with his splendid big antlers looking particularly fine.

"We gentlemen," said Mr. White-Tailed Deer to Billie Brownie, "are the ones who have antlers though the Miss and Mrs. Reindeer have antlers."

Mr. White-Tailed Deer was a magnificent-looking creature, and he told Billie Brownie something of himself, too, besides what he told him about the antlers.

"We live where there is thick underbrush and plenty of wooded country, and we manage to get through this kind of country even though we have such big antlers," he said.

"It is only we gentlemen white-tailed deer who act so cross at certain seasons, and then it is that we fight by putting our heads down before us and going straight at our enemies with our great antlers before us.

"We are brave, though, and we love life and we want to be here and we are going to see to it that we stay about. Yes, we are smart!

"We are one of the earliest known of all members of the deer family in this country. The early, early settlers knew of us and, of course, you know that the early settlers were the first arrivals among the people to settle here."

"Yes, I imagined that," smiled Billie Brownie, "but I'm always glad to be told, for I like to hear all the zoo news I can and I'd rather hear a thing twice than not to hear it at all."

"I'm not sure whether you'd speak of the early settlers as a bit of zoo news," said the White-Tailed Deer.

"Oh, I think so," said Billie Brownie, "for you were speaking of your family having been about at that time and that is White-Tailed Deer news.

"So Many Wonderful Creatures in Our Great Family."

at any rate, and you are in the zoo here now."

"Well, glad it interested you," said Mr. White-Tailed Deer.

Then Billie Brownie went to call on the Axis Deer.

"You're the most beautiful of all," Billie Brownie said, as the Axis Deer smiled sweetly.

"It is a lovely compliment, Billie Brownie," the Axis Deer said, "and it delights my heart, yet there are so many wonderful creatures in our great family—oh, so much finer than I could ever hope to be.

"There are splendid elk and moose, great, majestic, handsome animals, so big and so magnificent!

"There are curious ones, too, as the Mule Deer from the Rocky mountains with his long ears. He is a big creature and much larger than I am."

"Oh," said Billie Brownie, "size isn't everything. I love your soft tan hair and your beautiful white spots, and I like it that though you come from a warmer place than you are now in you do not complain."

"Ah," said the Axis Deer, "but think how kind they are to me. They have built a house for me so that in the winter I can go inside my lovely warm house and not mind the cold.

"So I could not complain."

"True, they have done that for you, lovely Axis Deer. But at the same time you aren't of the complaining kind. If you were you'd complain and grumble about the weather even though you have a warm home.

"Creatures who complain do so anyway and it shows they have such cross dispositions. Yes, I'm an admirer of yours, lovely, graceful, sweet-natured Axis Deer."

And the Axis Deer looked at Billie Brownie out of his beautiful eyes and smiled that smile that only a deer can smile—just a little wee smile, but oh, so full of sweetness!

THE EARLY RISERS

By JOHN BLAKE

ONCE roomed with a man who thought it was a virtue to get up early in the morning.

He did not get up early himself. But he thought he ought to.

Both of us had jobs that kept us at work late at night. The only opportunity for sleep we had was in the morning. I always made the most of my opportunity.

But my friend always felt guilty if he remained in bed after ten o'clock, no matter how late he had worked the night before.

He thought there was an intrinsic worth in getting out of bed at a certain hour.

Whether or not he utilized the time he "saved" from his sleep to good advantage made no difference. On the rare occasions when he did leave his bed early he did not spend the extra hours in hard work.

It is likely as not they would be squandered away in profitless inaction.

Getting up early, for instance, enables many people to acquire knowledge or culture that is useful to them. But the person who arises at the break of dawn and then wastes his time gains nothing but loss of sleep.

* * * * * * *

Some persons make a point of arriving at their offices earlier than they are required to. Then they adopt a superior attitude toward the other workers who merely arrive on time.

But unless the early bird spends his extra time catching the worm, what possible advantage can he have over the birds who arrive later?

The fact is that these reproachful ones would really like to do the things they profess to frown upon. They would like to lie in bed late in the morning and play hookey from church occasionally.

* * * * * * *

They do not realize that merely arising before seven or being unwillingly present at Sunday worship constitutes no great virtue. Unless they get real benefit from these acts, as thousands do, why should they continue to perform them?

Unwilling rectitude is certainly hypocritical. But hypocrisy itself is regarded as a sin.

It must be conceded, however, that the reproachful ones have the bulge on many of us frank offenders. That holier-than-thou attitude which they usually acquire must give them a very gratifying sense of superiority to the rest of mankind.

What Is Your Idea of God? — An Important Question

By F. A. WALKER

A GROUP of Chinese students studying in this country some time ago sent out a most unusual questionnaire. There are three questions included. "What is your idea of God?" "Do you believe in God?" and "Why?"

These questions were sent to hundreds of prominent men all over the country but the answers were not made public, although no man ought to be ashamed to let anyone know his views regarding three matters which are of so universal interest.

The question of "What is God?" has probably been asked more times since it first began to think than any other in all the category of our inquiries. Robespierre wrote down a profound truth in the words "If God did not exist it would be necessary to invent Him."

That which we do not know, we define. There is no man living, good or wicked, rich or poor, ignorant or educated who has not his own idea of God. And his idea may, and naturally would, be different from his neighbor's.

The Bible tells us that God is Spirit. Life, Truth, Love.

What is Spirit? What is Life? What is Truth?—Pilate asked this question and received no answer. What is Love? Can you give a satisfactory answer to these questions?

To the untutored mind nature reveals God. But nature is not and cannot be God since nature lacks the attributes of divinity.

The most convincing proof of the existence of God is not a proof at all.

It is the overwhelming craving of the human mind for a greater than itself, for a power, omnipotent, a mind, omniscient, a presence, all pervading.

No truly wise man denies God. Voltaire, who once denied Him, saw his unwisdom and built a church which he inscribed with a confession of his error.

Dependence is a part of the human make-up.

Reliance upon some one or something higher and mightier than ourselves is inborn and unavoidable.

We believe in a God, a supreme being, because we must believe.

What is your answer to the Chinese inquirers? What is your idea of God?

It is certain that you do believe. The reason why is plain. What kind of a God you believe in is largely of your own deciding.

It would be interesting to read the answers of the well-known men who replied to the questions of the Chinese students.

But more important to you than what their answers are is what yours is. It is truly something to think about.

When Baby Grows Up

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I'VE looked upstairs, I've looked down,
Here and there all over town,
In the garden, in the yard—
My, but I've been looking hard.
Baby missing! Help me find
One of just one certain kind,
Just the one I used to know
Not so very long ago.

Why, it seems just yesterday
Baby used to laugh and play,
Do the things that babies do,
Creep and crawl and smile and coo.
But today I climbed the stair;
Just imagine who was there?
Not a baby, not at all,
But a lady, big and tall.

There she was in baby's room,
Still the same pink roses bloom
On the paper, still the sun
Through the window peeps at one.
But the baby's gone away;
There's a lady there today,
Quite a lady, yet her name
And the baby's seem the same.

Once we had a baby, now
Something's happened here, somehow
Now we have a lady, yes,
But the nicest one, I guess.
Well, our baby's gone away,
But our lady's come to stay.
Baby's vanished, babies do—
But we love our daughter, too.

Dogs and Hydrophobia

By H. IRVING KING

ONE of the most widespread and most firmly believed superstitions in this country is that if you kill the dog that bit you, or have him killed, you will not have hydrophobia. As a matter of fact, hydrophobia is a specific germ disease; and if a person is bitten by a dog suffering from that disease, he is extremely likely to become inoculated, no matter what happens to the dog, and, unless he gets the Pasteur treatment in time, will die.

As a rule, now when a person is bitten by a dog suspected of having rabies, health officers insist that the dog be kept under observation for a certain length of time, instead of being killed at once, in order to see if the animal develops the suspected disease. Or, if some superstitious person has already killed the dog, the head is, if possible, at once secured and examined for a "positive" or "negative" result, in order that it may be ascertained if it is necessary for the bitten person to take the "treatment."

But so difficult is it to supplant ancient superstitions by modern science that, all over the country, dogs which have bitten persons are killed in the firm belief that danger of hydrophobia is thereby eliminated and no further regard is paid to the incident until, in some cases, the bitten person develops the dread disease and it is too late for help. In the vast majority of cases the dog probably did not have hydrophobia at all and the patient would have been safe anyway. In the other cases the patient dies a sacrifice to a superstition.

This superstition is merely an example of the old fallacy of our primitive ancestors, sympathetic magic. You kill the dog of which the disease is a part and you kill the disease. And, by sympathy, that part of the disease which has been transferred to the human being, this transference having been accomplished, according to the theory of our ancestors, by "the magic of contact."

Fifty Years With Navy Department

The Attractive Serving of Foods

By NELLIE MAXWELL

YOU hear the housewife quite frequently remark that when she serves her family with good wholesome food it is quite sufficient, without wasting time on garnishes and dishes which do not add to the food value. Let us think a moment about this. Is not the food value enhanced by a happy arrangement of food? Does it not appeal to the eye and palate? The ordinary everyday food which we tire of so often served in the same way daily, with a little furbishing, makes an appeal to the taste.

The appearance of a table and the food upon it add wonderfully, not only in point of esthetic taste, but as to digestive results as well, for we digest and assimilate more readily the food which pleases us as to its looks.

An ordinary pastry bag or tube will do wonders in food decoration. A bit of whipped cream piped on a dessert or salad, or a birthday cake will make it something in a class by itself.

One who has never had a beautiful birthday cake, has missed much. With a pastry tube one may save some of the foundation frosting with which the cake has been covered, tint it and with the tube or bag, pipe a fluted rim around the cake or decorate with small pink roses. It is a very simple matter and takes but little practice to make quite beautiful things.

A good cream whip is one of the indispensables. If one has a large family and needs a large one, it is an economy to buy that kind. But there are small egg beater-sizes which will beat a half cupful of cream.

If one has a small family the individual casseroles are most convenient. A small dish of leftover food will be enjoyed and eaten from such a dish when it would otherwise be refused.

We should all be particularly careful of the little niceties of table etiquette, for with the young habits are formed which will make them agreeable companions or otherwise.

Earth's Calculated Weight

Howe About—

By ED HOWE

© Bell Syndicate. WNU Service.

A noted doctor lately said that everywhere he notes the people are taking better care of their health; he expressed the belief that the average layman now knows more about hygiene than the average doctor did twenty years ago. I sincerely hope this is true. This is an age of information, because of endowed scientific men. And the results of their experiments are printed in newspapers, magazines and books. There is available in every home now a university, the course simplified for popular understanding. Why should not ordinary people become educated, and share in the benefits of modern discoveries?

After the people have learned the truth about health, let them advance to finance, public affairs, sociology, all very simple, but immensely important.

There is no such thing as the millenium we once looked for. The brighter day we formerly expected is still far over the horizon. The problem we confront is an individual one, and every man must handle it for himself. There is no perfume in a newspaper rose; no nourishment in a magazine loaf; everyone must provide his own.

The great preaching is the good example of individuals. Those in your audience remark not what you say, but what you do. A clean, well-behaved, successful, useful man is more valuable to a community than any dozen of its theory men.

If you are behaving properly, you are preaching properly.

I shall pass on presently, and am not personally interested, but sincerely wish those younger might find a more agreeable plan of association of the sexes. Could it not be handled better? In some way, both women and men suffer humiliation. What a sneak everone becomes when he engages in love! He is ashamed because he has been in love with some one else, and fears being caught. When the nicest woman marries, people say: "I thought she intended marrying the other man." And the husband hears about it, and is uncomfortable.

I know a man who is always indignant because he does not get along better, and arraigns his country and its system bitterly. There is no possibility of this man getting along. He has every habit that renders success impossible. When he isn't drunk, he is idle. There cannot exist on the face of the earth a country where a man may prosper with such habits as this man has.

Every system of philosophy is so long as to be confusing. One man wrote of philosophy all his life, we are informed, and at the conclusion of it had not made up his mind what he finally believes by the time he is thirty; life is sufficiently simple to admit of this.

Look over the most useful men of your town. Hoy many of them are "boomers"? Are not your most useful men noted for quite effectiveness rather than for noisy spluttering in clubs? The idea in everything is to get things done, not to talk about them.

It is a bad habit to clamor for more than you can get, as most people do. Examine the next ten people you meet, and you will find at least seven of them demanding things they are not entitled to. And if you take anything you are not entitled to, it will make you more trouble than it is worth.

* * *

The devil is dead, but he never took a much interest in your misconduct as your neighbors did. And your neighbors are still here to watch you.

For centuries the impression has been given in literature that only artists, writers, preachers and women are good souls, and long for human betterment. And for centuries, also, it has been practical business men who have made such progress in human betterment as has been made.

A woman member of the English parliament is very active in trying to reform the world, but is badly handicapped by the mean male members; one of them lately said to her: "I will answer if you shut your mouth and listen. You might at least try to have some manners and sense."

Some say it is no disgrace to be poor. It is except in literature. A poor man is like a mechanic who works at his trade many years, and knows nothing about it. The financial side of life is very important; it is a mistake to study art, religion, and neglect finance.

The devil is busy. Sometimes he does not punish promptly, but usually gets around to it finally. Even if a man escapes entirely his worrying about it amounts to punishment.

Most men are unhappy because they cannot convert the world to their opinions. My ambition is one convert; and usually I can do little with him.

"I have noticed," an old fellow writes, "that when I am out in company, and no lady member of my family is present to look after me, some other women chides me gently as I ill behave. Or as she thinks I do; men and women never agree as to that."

* * *

I don't believe it is best for a young fellow to start out to be a great man. It is better if he starts out to be a good workman in whatever calling he adopts. The great men come from the good workmen promoted for merit.

WESTERN GIRL STRENGTHENED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Manchester, So. Dakota.—"I was in a terribly weak and run-down condition when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it and after a short time I felt better. We are a family of five and live on a 360-acre farm, so I have quite a good deal to do both indoors and out. At first I was unable to do anything and had to have a girl, but after taking the Vegetable Compound I finally gained my strength back and also gained considerable in weight. I will gladly answer letters from women in regard to your medicine."—Mrs. Otto J. Geyer, R. F. D. 1, Box 20, Manchester, So. Dakota.

Woodpecker Made Trouble

A persevering woodpecker, which drilled two holes through wooden protection on pipes leading from a large tank, is responsible for the village of Emmons, Minn., being without water. After the bird had pecked the holes under the steel tank, subzero temperature froze the pipe and split the tank, letting all the water out.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Warns of Vesuvius

Dr. Akitune Imamura is known as the leading seismologist of the Far East and is called by some scientists the greatest in the world. He has recently made a very careful examination of Mount Vesuvius in Italy and believes it is due for a serious outburst. He says Japan was not expected to experience a great earthquake disaster similar to that of 1923 for at least another century.

The oriental peach moth, which probably came to this country from Japan about 1913, is becoming a serious fruit tree pest.

Protecting Our Rights

FOLLOWING shortly after the founding of the colonial governments in this country by people who came here to escape persecution by the various established religions of the old world, the framers of the constitution were careful in its construction to provide that the rights of the people should be protected to the fullest extent. Even then it was not thought that a sufficient guarantee had been given to the personal liberty of the people, and the first amendment was passed. This amendment read:

"Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

This amendment has stood in the way of those who would abolish the right of the people to free speech, of those who would silence the press, and now blocks the efforts of those who would have Puritanical Sunday laws passed, compelling all in this country to observe the first day of the week as a holy day, regardless of the teaching of any other belief which they may hold.

In order to enforce the first amendment and prosecute those who violate it, Representative Berger of Wisconsin has introduced a bill into Congress to this effect. The first amendment is the guarantee of personal liberty of speech and belief.

All power to Berger and his bill.

Initiative

A MOTOR BOAT drifts aimlessly down the river, there is gas in the tank, the motor is in perfect condition, and yet, it is swung here and there by the current, responding to one drift and then the other, for the motor is not in use and propeller not turning. Presently, the fly wheel is given a turn, the motor catches, the propeller cuts the water, and the boat heads in a straight course up stream to reach a definite destination.

Similarly, in life there are many persons whom nature has imbued with strength, mind and talent, yet they, for the lack of initiative, for the want of ambition, are carried hither and yon by their whims and fancies, persuaded into many and diverse paths by those who care to exert their influence upon them, and at last are found among the driftwood of humanity, victims of inactivity. They have accomplished nothing, but lived slaves of inertia, building air castles and waiting in hope that by luck their castles will materialize—indeed they do not truly live but only exist.

Men who truly live, who really obtain something from life, as well as contribute something to the welfare of others, are those who not only dream, but put their ideas into practice and by constant use of faculties in their possession strive to make dreams realities. They have a definite goal in life and each stroke is played to bring them nearer that destination. To those each day is not but a repetition of its predecessor, a number of hours to be whiled away as quickly and as easily as possible, but is a new era in which something definite is to be attained, and the hours seem only too short, the period of rest too long.

It behooves all to get into the game and take an active interest in all affairs, to make life worth while and not drift aimlessly with the current for the lack of a start.

Dr. R. O. Tripp of Woodside has presented to Assessor Hayward for use in his office one of the oldest records of the county. It is an assessment roll of 1853. At that time this county comped the third supervisor district of San Francisco, and extended from Colma on the north to San Gregorio and San Francisquito creeks on the south. Dr. Tripp was supervisor of the district and his partner, M. A. Parkhurst, was deputy assessor. There are only sixty-seven on the roll, the largest being that of Francisco Casanueva, whose 20,000 acres at San Gregorio was assessed at $4.000. As an evidence of how the county has grown it might be stated that there are now 5000 assessments instead of 67. The book will become one of the relics of the courthouse.

GALL STONES

By L. Winfield Kohn, M. D.
New York City
Member Gorgas Memorial

The condition of gall stones is a very common one. In fact, it is much more prevalent than is ordinarily believed. The medical term for this ailment is cholelithiasis. People who suffer from this disease do not necessarily have violent attacks of so-called gall stone colic. The ailment may be characterized by other symptoms often regarded as merely dyspeptic.

It is believed that gall stones in most instances are preceded by inflamation of the gall bladder and that this is the basis upon which the stones will eventually be formed. The gall bladder in which bile is normally stored in concentrated form, will as a result of the catarrh-like inflammation invite the formation of stones. The presence of catarrhal material may favor the precipitation of bile salts about it as a nucleus and in consequence stones develop. It is also possible that, as a result of the catarrh, the bile stored within this organ will lose its solvent properties and elements ordinarily kept in solution will precipitate out.

Certain other factors may favor the development of gall stones, such cold climates and dampness. It is more common in women than men probably because of constipation, inactive physical habits, and pregnancy. It may occur in any age of life, especially after forty. Gluttonous eating and the ingestion of rich foods are regarded as an invitation for the disease.

Certain former illneses, such as typhoid fever, may have affected the gall bladder in such a way as to favor the formtion of stones At times, stones may form in the gall ducts or channels leading from the liver as well as in the gall bladder. The symptoms may be many and varied. There is no typical picture. Some symptoms, however , are much more characteristic than others. An attack of colic in the upper abdomen with chills and slight jaundice is very suspicious. A pain in the upper right portion of the abdomen radiating to the back and shoulders is a common complaint. Often headaches and so-called billiousness are the featured symptoms.

Patients who suggest the possibility of gall stones should be studied thoroughly in order that the diagnosis may be definitely made. Resort should be made to complete studies of the excreta, stomach and bile secretions, the blood, X-ray observations of the stomach, bowels, and gall tract.

After the diagnosis is made, proper advice as to diet, medication, habits, and general behavior may bring about definite or even permanent improvement. Surgery is not necessary in the great number of cases. Main efforts should be directed to ridding the patients who do not respond to conscientious medical care, it will be necessary to resort to operation.

Unemployment in State To Be Relieved Soon

SACRAMENT, March 1 — New definite steps to combat seasonal unemployment in California through earlier construction of roads under the state's $50,000,000 two-year building program was announced today by B. B. Meeks, director of public works, with promise of employment for many thousands more men to be made available within the next few weeks.

Letting of contract fo the Sutter By-Pass causeway, connecting Yolo and Sutter counties via Knights Landing at a cost of $210,942 will furnish employment for several hundred men, Meek said, while early activity on seven miles of roadway between French Camp and Messdale, San Joaquin county will play an important part in relieving this labor situation in the delta country.

This work, for which $195,000 is available, will advance the Stockton-Santa Cruz via Oaklnd road project, and will be of value to all of northeastern California.

The mother bear turned on her cubs and slew them during a brainstorm induced by constant rapping on the cage by visitors, and Redding.

ULCER OF THE STOMACH

By L. Winfield Kohn, M. D.
New York City
Member Gorgas Memorial

A sore, similar in appearance to a cold sore often seen on the lip, may develop within the lining of the stomach or within the adjoining small bowel (duodenum). This is a stomach ulcer. It is very likely to follow in the wake of other diseases such as pnuemonia, typhoid, tonsillitis, and influenza. It may also be caused by alcoholic liquors or ice cold non-alcoholic drinks, and by the use of excessive spices and other irritative foods.

Stomach ulcer generally comes on slowly and insidiously. The condition may become worse as time goes on or it may improve only to return more violently at a later date.

Pain in the pit of the stomach is most often the outstanding complaint. It may be associated with such other symptoms as heartburn, belching nausea, vomiting, regurgitation, or even vomiting of blood. As a rule the distress comes on after eating, anywhere from a few minutes to hours. At times it becomes most severe only during the night. Patients will often gain relief from the use of bicarbonate of soda but this is only temporary.

It is important that a correct diagnosis be made and that proper early treatment be instituted. All ulcer cases are not precisely the same. On the contrary, they differ in type and degree. Some cases may be treated in the office and others must be put to bed. The treatment in all cases should require a long period of time, and observation of the case should embrace years. Neglect in this direction will endanger the lives of ulcer sufferers.

The treatment will vary a great deal, depending upon the nature of the individual case. The forms of treatment are many. Mental and physical rest, as well as diet and medication, are a few of the more important. The final result, however, in most cases will depend upon the spirit of co-operation exemplified by the patient toward the doctor.

This collection, containing reproductions of the world's great master ainters, has been loaned to the schools for the purpose of raising a fund with which to purchase pictures for the two school buildings according to Mrs. Gladys Bruce, art instructor at the high school, who is chairman of a committee for the exhibition of the pictures.

This collection consists of masterpieces representing the French Italian, Flemish, English, Dutch, Spanish, eGrman and American schools of art. Famous portraits, landscapes, marines, and pastoral scenes in color of the original canvases will be on display. The reproductions are said to be of the finest type produced, showing the color as well as the brush strokes of the original canvases.

The pictures will be display in the girls' clubroom of the high school, the afternoons of March 12, 13 and 14 and at the new McKinley School at the corner of Elwood and James on March 15 and 16. Certain seniors residing in these zones have been given charge of seeing that their zones are properly canvassed. To each student that disposes of ten tickets a free ticket will be given.

The incidental music during the play is one of its most pleasing features. Strains of "Smilin' Thru" are repeatedly played by the orchestra directed by Max Gelber. Eugene Bone will supply the dance music for the last act.

The plot is based on the love affair of Kathleen Dungannon, played by Teresa Blas, the niece of John Carteret, Tom Ambrose, and Kenneth Wayne, Lorin Denny and the things that happen as a result of his oppoition to his niece's marriage to Kenneth. Bess Legget has the part of Moonyeen, Mr. Carteret's bride-to-be who was murdered the day of her wedding. CHAPTER X—Continued

—14—

Rand helped with the Christmas party plans. On little white cards, gay with candles and holly, they printed the invitation.

Auntalmiry's Christmas Party at the Lone Pine
Christmas Eve
Five O'clock.

Just one week before Christmas, the Budlong boys waded through the snow all over the Evergreen end of the island, and delivered the invitations, one to every house. It could not have been more than ten minutes after she received the announcement that Alice Andover was to be seen sailing grandly up the hill, a sort of full-rigged majesty in her advance. Gay met her beneath the pine.

"Now don't blame me. I hadn't a thing in the world to do with it. I only lent her the cottage as she asked. She did everything herself. She sold everything she owns to pay for it, and it isn't going to cost you a cent. She has gone without jelly, gone without butter, gone without cake, gone without sugar—it's her party, and none of our business, if you ask me."

Alice Andover sank weakly into a chair. "I might have known it. That's the thanks I get. That's now folks take to good, honest, conscientious administration. And then the audacity to invite me to the party."

"Oh, please come! She'll be so disappointed if you don't come. She wants you to see how cleverly she has managed."

"Oh, I'll come. And since she's got the unmitigated audacity to have a Christmas party in spite of my orders, I'll send my presents as usual. Oh, I always give little things—people been here for years—all in the family, you know, and I being the administrator. So you can tell the foolish old woman I'll send my presents as usual. I've never missed one of Auntalmiry's parties yet, not since that first devil-cursed one fifty years ago when—"

"Oh, don't. She—she thinks maybe he is the Unknown Soldier at Washington; she—"

Alice Andover stared. She opened her mouth, closed it with great firmness and blinked hard at times.

"Unknown Soldier!—Good heavens. What next?" Then she added humorously, with a bright glint in her gray eyes, "Well, whatever he is, thank God, it is unknown. That's all I've got to say for Buddy Bridges—Unknown Soldier."

The next day Rand climbed the tall pine and strung it with Christmas lights from topmost point to lowest branches, round and round, a hundred little colored bulbs, and connected them to a switch beside the window where Auntalmiry could turn it on before the party. Auntalmiry was enchanted with the idea of wiring the tall pine; she had not dreamed of such royal welcome to her Christmas guests. For days before the party she talked of little else.

It was only three days before Christmas, the twenty-second of December, in the thick darkness of the early evening, that Ronald Ingram came again.

He entered hurriedly, his manner for the first time showing something troubled, something furtive. He glanced over his shoulder nervously, and closed the door behind him swiftly.

"I shouldn't have come," he began hurriedly. "But I had to. I came to Portland to close up some contracts, and I simply stole the time and made the trip over on the afternoon boat to see you. I must catch the first boat back. Short—but I had to see you. Gay, I have thought of you constantly. Your face has swum before my eyes, your voice rung in my ears, the light little touch of your fingers—" He shook his head impatiently.

"Mr. Ingram," she said with pretty dignity, "please don't do that. I assure you I do not like it."

"Oh, you think I am chaffing. But I mean it. I—Miss Delane, tell me. If I should sell out—all my interests—my business connections—would you—marry me? Would you even think of it? I know it is too soon for you to know— But would you let me come where you are, let me see you, try to make you love me— Is there any chance for me at all? I would have some money. I could take care of you. We could go any place—West, or to Europe, anywhere."

There was no doubting the sincerity of his words, the eagerness of his desire.

"Don't," Gay said gently. "You will spoil our pleasant friendship, and I have liked it. It is because you have been away, you have been lonely, perhaps worried. It isn't really I you want. Why, you don't even know me. It is just—woman, companionship, sympathy, soft things. That is all."

But he shook his head, clung to her hands. "Gay, it is you. Nothing else. Nobody else. You. From the moment I saw you down in the cove— Oh, I know you don't love me now—but couldn't you? If I get things all straightened out, and—do something else— Gay, isn't there a chance?"

From somewhere down the lane sounded the low siren of a car.

Ronald listened a moment, but still clung to her hand. "Gay, don't say no. Don't say anything. Just wait, think of me a little, and as soon as I can—I will come again. But try to think of me—if not with love—at least with a little tenderness."

Quickly he lifted her hands, palms upward, kissed them passionately, one after the other, crushed them to his face and went away.

Gay sank into the big chair and buried her face in her arms. A criminal! That artless, boyish, ingenuous man, with the pleading voice and the eager eyes? But even a criminal deserves some kindness of thought from the woman to whom he gives his love. Gay was very kind.

The next day, very early, Rand appeared at her door, dressed roughly for outdoor winter weather in heavy oilskin coat and breeches. He was hurried in manner, preoccupied. He told Gay he was obliged to run down to Boston for a few days on business.

"Now you sit tight while I'm gone," he cautioned her. "I'm on the trail, and I'm going through with it. I've told the folks I'm looking for a job, and they won't expect me home until they see me. You just wait here. Say nothing to anyone. Do nothing. Don't set your foot in those woods under any circumstances. And at night, Gay, please, to please me, go down and stay with Auntalmiry. And don't worry, for I shan't be in any danger."

"You are not going to Boston," she said bitterly. "You are going into those woods, to lie under the plazza and watch the clubhouse, and try to catch those murderers. They'll catch you, first, Rand, don't, please don't. What business is it of ours if they break the law? What are their affairs to us? Why should you risk your life—"

"Oh, there's no danger, Gay, not a bit of it. I'll be careful, I promise you. Just a little weather eye out for squalls. No, I am going to Boston. I have gone to Boston. Get that in your mind, and stick to it. I shan't be able to write you, and I may not be home for several days. Just wait for me, and don't worry."

But Gay did worry, worried heartbreakingly. But she would not go to Auntalmiry. Rand might come, and she wished to be there, waiting for him where he left her. He might need her—a shot in the night, a scream of terror—Gay set her small sleek head determinedly. Nothing, nothing in the world should keep her from going to him in answer if he called for help.

She was glad for the excitement of the Christmas preparations to occupy her hands, if not her thoughts, through the dreary days that intervened.

It never occurred to her that he would not be back by the twenty-fourth of December for the party on Christmas eve. But the morning passed, and he did not come. Gay had no heart for the laughter, the young excitement of the island lovers, the flushed joyousness of Auntalmiry. Rand did not come. It would be Christmas eve, her Christmas eve, and Rand did not come.

At three o'clock Gay took Auntalmiry by the hand and led her down to the Apple Tree, where she put her bodily to bed, tucking the blankets about her and begging her to take a sadly needed rest.

So it could have been but very little after three when she softly closed the door of the Apple Tree behind her and set her feet in the path through the snow to the top of the hill. And glancing up, ahead of her in the path, saw a man walking toward the cottage. Gay almost called out to him, expecting Rand, because she wanted Rand. But before sound left her lips she silenced the call, for she saw that it was a stranger, one who seemed to make his way unsteadily in the face of the brisk wind from the sea, staggering a little.

When he reached the plazza of the Lone Pine, he did not wait to knock, but opened the door slowly and went in, closing it after him. Gay was but a little way behind, and she ran in breathlessly, but stopped short in surprise when she did not find him in the living room nor the kitchen.

"Hello," she called. "Hello! Anybody up there?" But received no answer.

Frightened by the unnatural silence, and mindful of Rand's words of warning, she went to the desk, slipped her pistol deftly into the pocket of her heavy coat, and then she climbed the stairs, watchful and alert.

And there indeed she found him, lying face downward on the soft rug of her bedroom floor.

"Wh-what are you doing?" she demanded foolishly. "What do you want?"

He neither moved nor answered. So Gay went to him timidly and bent over him that she might see his face. His eyes were closed, his lips hard set. She tried to raise him, but his head fell limply from her hands.

She shrank away from him, shuddering with fear.

CHAPTER XI

The crisp voice of Alice Andover had never sounded so sweet to Gay's ears as at that moment.

"Gay Delane! Where are you? I saw you take that foolish creature home, so I came to see if I could—What is the matter?"

Gay beckoned to her sternly from the top of the stairs. "Come up," she said, and her voice was hollow. "Come up."

Alice Andover was never one to hesitate in a crisis. She came at once, breathing hard. Gay pointed dramatically to the bedroom.

Alice Andover gave one wide-eyed glance and saw the prostrate form.

"Good heavens, oh, good heavens! Where did he come from—where did you get him—I mean—"

"He came up the hill just ahead of me. Walked right in. Came upstairs, and evidently fell down there. Or lay down. There he is."

Alice Andover crossed the room and stood above him, touching the inert body tentatively with the toe of her shoe.

"Drunk," she said disgustedly. "Dead drunk."

Gay breathed more freely, in some relief. "Oh, is that it? I—was afraid of—oh, terrible things!"

At that moment, spasmodically he moved, and his face rolled back into the light.

"Oh, oh!" Alice Andover's explanation was a startled gasp. "Oh, my God. I believe— Oh, poor Almiry. I believe it is Buddy Bridges. Come home to his poor trusting mother—dead drunk. Oh, it is all my fault. Oh, what in the world have I done? Buddy Bridges—poor Almiry. All my fault."

"Buddy Bridges? Oh, really? Oh, Auntalmiry—how happy—" Then came sickening realization of the pain it would be to the little old woman to have him come home to her like this, dead drunk. Better a thousand times for her to live on in her trusting ignorance, fondly believing him an unknown hero, pure and fine. "Oh, poor Auntalmiry! See here, Mrs. Andover, this drunken creature shall not spoil the poor dear's Christmas party. The way she has slaved, and saved, and starved herself— He shan't! Let her have one happy night—it may be her last, since Buddy came home like this. He shan't spoil it. Not if I have to poison him."

Alice Andover, trained to efficiency by years of hard administrating, suddenly became practical and decided. Being in charge of things always aroused her latent cleverness.

"We'll just roll him over in the corner out of the way," she said briskly, and cover him up with the rug, and let him sleep it off. We'll lock the door, and keep him here till it is over."

"Will he stay drunk all night?" Gay asked. "Shouldn't we give him something—"

"Whisky! I wish we had some whisky. If we had time—maybe we could keep him drunk for a week. I don't know just how long it does last, but I know the party lasts all night. He may sleep it off."

"I have a little cognac. Brought it in myself—from Paris—in the toe of my dancing slipper. Real stuff," Gay said proudly. "I was keeping it for a wedding, but he can have that."

"Good! We'll give him a big—swig—of it." She brought out the nautical term with a nautical swagger, both doubtless inherited from the long line of seafaring ancestors. "We'll keep him as—tight as a lord—until the party's over."

Carefully but sternly they rolled him over half out of sight beneath the window-seat, and covered him.

So Gay brought the precious smuggled bottle of cognac, never yet unsealed, and they gave him a generous swallow, forcing the bottle between his teeth not without much difficulty. He choked over it and coughed painfully, while the conspirators held their breath in a panic above him. But presently he relapsed into troubled breathing again.

"That'll hold him for a while," said Alice Andover grimly.

They locked the door upon him and went downstairs. But when Alice Andover moved as if to go to her own home, Gay refused to be left alone in the house with the drunken creature upstairs, and Alice Andover was obliged to remain, fixing herself up for the party as well as she could with Gay's face powder and electric curlers. They had tea to strengthen their shattered nerves, and at five o'clock tiptoed up to the bedroom to give him another potent draught of the cognac. He swallowed this time with less difficulty, and as he drank, to their horror, his eyes opened, eyes large and dark, Gay noticed even in that horrible moment, eyes now visionless, not seeing. When the muffled heavy breathing recommenced, they tiptoed from the room.

Alice Andover, because the opening of his eyes had frightened her, was freshly furious. She shook her fist at the door when it was safely locked behind her.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

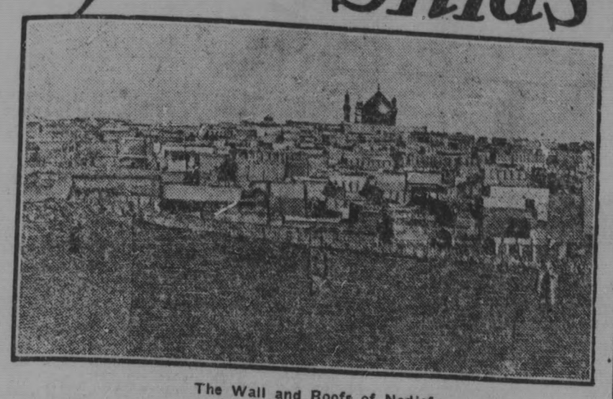
Holy City of the Shias



The Wall and Roofs of Nedjef.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

NEDJEF, a desert city west of the Euphrates in Iraq, is a sort of secondary Mecca in the Mohammedan world. It is the annual pilgrimage place for the Shias, the "dissenters" of Islam, just as Mecca is a goal of pilgrims among the orthodox Mohammedans.

It is five days by mule or camel caravan from Bagdad to Nedjef, and in the eventful centuries since the Shias founded Nedjef—on the spot where a nephew of the Prophet Mohammed was slain—it is estimated that over 25,000,000 Moslems have made the pilgrimage to this mysterious desert city of golden domes, fabulous treasures, and weird rites.

Thousands of devotees from the Shia hordes of India, Persia and Turkestan flock through Bagdad each year, bringing with them their mummified dead—salted and dried—for burial in the holy ground about the mystic city. By camel caravan and winding mule train the patient pilgrims make the long march; many from distant Turkestan are a whole year making the round trip. To help handle the throng that pours through Bagdad each spring and autumn, enterprising Bagdad Jews have established an "arabanah," or stage line, from Bagdad to Kerbela, the half-way town on the desert route to Nedjef. From Kerbela on the way leads through the dreary and monotonous desert—a rolling sea of gray sand, the margin of the great waste that sweeps Arabia from Kerbela and Nedjef to Mecca, Aden, and the Red sea.

As one approaches Nedjef he sees first the great gold dome of its mosque, burning in the sun rays; then, the high, frowning walls that surround the sacred city. It is a gorgeous spectacle, miragelike vision, as of a mighty city floating in the air. The high, sharp walls shut it off abruptly from the desert, and it seems a mighty thing apart from the surrounding sea of sand.

Nedjef is a freak city. Not a green thing—a plant, shrub, or tree—lives within its dry, hot limits. It is built on a high plain of soft sandstone. The narrow, crooked streets, in many places mere passages three or four feet wide, wind about like jungle paths. In the Arab quarter the mud-plastered houses are all two stories high and, odd as it sounds, have no windows facing the street. Only a wooden door, massive and bolt-studded, but so low that one must stoop to enter, opens to the street.

Cellars Are Refuges From the Heat.

One of the strange features of this strange city is its cellars. In summer the fierce heat drives the panting people deep down into the earth, like rats in a hole. Beneath every house is a cellar, burrowed minelike to amazing depths; one, it is said, reaches an astoundingly low level, being more than 100 feet below the street. Down into these damp, dark holes the Shias flee when the scorching desert air sizzles above and imported German thermometers stand at 130 degrees Fahrenheit. Some of the cellars (serdabs) are arranged in a tier of cells or rooms, one below the other; the upper room is used in the first hot months, the family going lower down as the heat increases.

So many of these vast underground retreats have been dug that the excavated material, carried from the city on donkeys' backs and dumped on the desert outside, forms a great hill over 100 feet high, from the top of which a fine view of the city may be had. It is said that many of these serdabs are connected by means of underground corridors, and that criminals, who swarm in Nedjef, easily elude capture by passing through these tunnels from house to house, finally emerging at a point in the city remote from their place of disappearance.

In the heart of Nedjef, its great dome visible for miles on the surrounding desert, stands the magnificent mosque of Abbas, the shrine that draws the teeming throng from all the Middle East.

Turning from the native quarter, the visitor comes to the long straight bazaar leading to the mosque. He is struck with the difference in the looks of the Nedjef people and the crowds at Kerbela. Many uncouth, swaggering desert men are among them, their long hair, faded dress, and camel sticks, or oversupply of guns and sidearms, marking them as from the wild places. There is a spirit of crude, barbaric primitiveness in the crowd that surges past. The little touches of outside influence one sees at Bagdad, like an occasional European hat or an imported overcoat, are all lacking at Nedjef. Here is old Arabia in original bindings.

Beauties of the Mosque.

The mosque is come upon suddenly, for the crowded bazaar street ends in an open plaza before this dazzling structure.

In amazement one gazes on its wonderful facade; golden tiles and fancy silver work rise above and about the great portal, and across the wide entrance is hung a giant chain of brass, worn smooth and shiny from contact with the millions of turbans, tarboosbes, and keffeyehs which have brushed under it in centuries gone by. This chain is so hung that all who enter the mosque must bow.

Through this open gate can be seen the base of the great mosque itself. The great gold tiles which cover the dome also run to the very base of the mosque. And on the inside of the walls about the court are more gold tiles. Above the outer portal, too, on the outside, are sprawling Arabic characters 20 inches high, seemingly cut from sheets of gold. What must this barbaric splendor have cost!

The cost of the wonderful temple itself is but a bagatelle compared with the value of the treasure in its vault. For ages, be it known, Indian princes, shahs, and nobles of the Shia faith have made precious gifts to this temple at Nedjef, pouring into it a priceless stream of jewels, gold, and plate. The looting of the Nedjef mosque has been a favorite dream of soldiers in the Middle East. The true enormity of the treasure at Nedjef was only brought to light less than a generation ago when the shah of Persia made the hahj and the pent-up wealth was revealed to his royal gaze by its zealous official keeper, the "Kilitdar."

But no Christian has ever seen the inner glories of the great mosque of Abbas at Nedjef. The contrast between two faiths is striking; a Moslem walking into a Christian church is made welcome; a Christian who walked into the Moslem mosque at Nedjef would be slain as a defiler; yet both claim the same God!

More human bodies are buried in the plain outside the walls of Nedjef, it is said, than in any other one spot on earth. Myriads of fancy tombs, terminating at the top in little blue-tiled domes, rise from the plain. And all the millions of pilgrims who have come in ages past with corpses for burial have also brought money to spend. The richer the man who brings the body, the greater the toll taken.

Burial There Is Costly.

Burial sites within view of the great mosque bring a high price. Tax is laid on every corpse imported from India, Persia, etc. Many bodies are smuggled in. It is told of one astute Persian pilgrim that he divided his grandfather's skeleton and sent it in separate parcels by mail to save freight and tax.

When a death caravan reaches the outskirts of Nedjef, they unpack their grewsome baggage and prepare the various bodies for burial. The crude methods of embalming or mummifying would expose Nedjef to disease were it not for the dry desert air. The very few folk of Nedjef who work for a living make money manufacturing fancy shrouds, stamped with Koranic sentiments, for the burial of corpses brought in by the pilgrims.

Others turn out prayer bricks ("Torba"), which every Shia uses in his daily prayers. These are made from holy clay, scooped up from the great cemetery and pressed into tiny odd-shaped bricks, and also stamped with an inscription from the Koran. When a Shia prays, he lays this torba on the ground, faces Nedjef, and prostrates himself, touching his forehead against the sacred brick.

In all of this unnatural city one sees not a tree or shrub; not even a potted plant. It is a dry, prisonlike place of somber gray stones and mud-plastered walls. Remove its mosque, its one priceless possession, and Nedjef, with its horde who live on those that come to pray, would perish from the earth. In the 1,200 years of its eventful life, not one useful article has been manufactured within its fanatical precincts.

Yet in all Islam, Shias turn to Nedjef to say their prayers. To Nedjef every good man must make the pilgrimage once in his life, and at Nedjef he hopes to be buried when he dies.

So They Took It

Although J. Walter McGee, manager of a Kansas City lunch company, kept a revolver in his restaurant as a protection against bandits, it didn't do him much good. In holding up McGee and robbing the place of a small amount of cash in the cash register two bandits discovered the revolver under the counter.

"What's this for?" one of the bandits asked.

"I keep that for bandits," McGee replied.

"You've lost a good gun," the robber laughed as the pair made off.

More About Clothes.

AS HELEN continued her shopping tour the next day she was smiling, revealing teeth that had received excellent care in the last few weeks. "Do you know that I'm getting to love the feel of beautiful fabrics? Something of the same appeal an artist experiences. And to think how I used to just grab anything." The charming shopper smiled back at that—there had been other Helens in her career.

"I had an idea there was a bit of an artist tucked away in that dreamy nature of yours." Then came a thoughtful moment. "Brown is such a good color for you, Mrs. Crane, that I should like you to make it the basic color of your wardrobe. Shoes, stockings, hats, and sports to tone in. It suits your sunny brown hair and hazel eyes so well that I should like you to let your preference for colors lie with the browns, tans, yellow and rich creams."

They were in a fitting room now, the shopper was taking down the suit the stock girl had hung up the moment before. "I am going to advise this tan tweed, Mrs. Crane. Isn't this short double-breasted box coat a darling? And please note this adorable radium silk blouse. The vest effect is good—it buttons high at the neck. The turn-back cuffs are drawn down and turned over the coat sleeves. The skirt you see is just a plain wrap-around."

"I've been so fat and clumsy—I can hardly visualize myself wearing that nifty little suit," Helen demurred, all the time her eyes fastened lovingly upon it.

Indulgently the shopper smiled. "With this you must wear a taupe fox scarf when you don't want the tailored notched effect of your collar. Your shoes must be low-heeled, two-toned calf-skin oxfords, without a toe-cap, and service weight stockings to match the lighter shade of your shoes. Your hat will be a simple tan visca designed to fit your head, a small brim and tailored bow." This outfit was typical of the best taste in street clothes.

Clothes Sense.

"You know"—and Helen's smile was infectious, "I really believe I'm acquiring clothes sense. I fully realize that this is an instance where the costume follows the individuality first."

"Fashion should come last, my dear Mrs. Crane. Always—always consider individuality first. In this instance we have admirably combined both. It's too bad that fashion and good taste are not at all times synonymous."

"The other day," Helen said, "I called on a woman who is short and stout—she was wearing a dress light in color to her broad hips, then dark to the hem. It made her look squatty."

"It would—a short, stout woman needs every inch of height that line can lend her. Only the tall and very slender can afford to have striking change in values. Take plaids and checks — sometimes their color schemes are most pleasing, yet they must be resisted by the short and stout. Some women you meet on the streets have the symmetry and line of their bodies broken up by too greatly contrasting values. Plaids and checks, white stripes, flowered material, all must await careful study of the wearer's limitations before selection. I consider plain materials in better taste," the shopper declared unhesitatingly.

"I'm quite certain I shall always like them best," Helen enthusiastically concurred.

"One of the fundamentals of real smartness, Mrs. Crane, is that each type of costume has its own good time to be worn." The shopper seemed to be boring that in by her steady gaze into Helen's brown eyes. "But I'm sorry to say this principle is sadly violated. Business women frequently appear during office hours in evening frocks, arms bare to the shoulders, and very low necks. They don't seem to understand that to be smartly dressed is to understand the fitness of things." Helen visioned one that did, but refrained from mentioning it. But she did smile inwardly as she recalled how effectively that "pleasing exterior" had pitchforked her—into new avenues of thought—and into new and delightful living.

Hats and Shoes.

The fitter was putting a few last pins in the hem of Helen's skirt. The eagle eye of the shopper was carefully watching the alterations while she went on talking. "Hats and shoes are indeed intergral parts of a well-chosen costume, Mrs. Crane. And I want to say just this while I think of it. It is not the frock, the hat or the shoes alone that makes a woman; it is the suitable combination of all three of them.

"Every woman has the feeling for her dress born in her—if she will only consciously aid its development by wide-awake observation of herself and others. And give plenty of time and thought to this important question. But hats—they really are a problem, and we'll discuss them more fully when you have decided to make your selections."

No Night Hunger

We can go eight or nine hours at night without feeling hungry, although if awake we should want two or three meals, because we breathe slower, and less oxygen enters the body to consume our food and induce hunger. There is, too, the absence of exercise.

Serious Handicap

Chester Welde Cuthell of the American Bar association's air law committee introduced at Buffalo a resolution to place transoceanic flights under the control of the secretary of commerce.

"The trouble with transoceanic flights," Mr. Cuthell said afterwards at the University club in New York, "is that when one thing goes wrong everything is wrong. It is like the anecdote.

"'It doesn't do a chap any harm, a rich man said to a poor man—'no, it doesn't do a chap any harm whatever to be thrown on his own resources.'

"'But, the trouble is,' said the poor man, 'it always happens when he hasn't any.'"

Two Lives Saved by Marvel of Surgery

Two patients, whose respiration had already ceased and who were virtually dead, have been recalled to life in the hospital of Moerby, near Stockholm, through operations performed on the heart by two young Swedish surgeons, according to a statement by the head physician of the hospital published there. The patients suffered from thrombosis, a condition whereby blood clots are formed in the blood vessels. The thrombi, or clots, had entered the heart, stopping up the artery of the lungs so that the blood could not be emptied from the left half of the heart. A young physician, Dr. Clarence Crafoord, assisted by Dr. J. P. Stroembaeck, at once decided to attempt operations, quickly made incisions in the heart and removed the thrombi. Both patients now seem to be out of danger. This operation was first made by a German surgeon, Doctor Trendelenburg and only two or three successful cases are so far recorded in the history of medicine.

Chairman Had Merely Got Republics Mixed

"How should I know whose republic it was?" retorted a committee chairman, following her report at the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs Sixth district conference.

The feature of her report was in telling how good the disabled veterans are who live in the hospital hereabouts.

"They are great readers of literature," she said. "The only thing one boy asked for Christmas was 'Pluto's Republic.'"

There wasn't a ripple of amusement; the 450 women sitting before her did not seem to quite know why an official sitting on the platform nudged the speaker as she sat down. The chairman of the meeting allowed the correction:

"Did you mean 'Plato's Republic'?"—Boston Globe.

Wouldn't Take Free Bread

Something for nothing failed to go over in Pittsfield, Mass., says the Boston Globe. A salesman trying to introduce a new brand of bread to that city stood on a busy corner with a truckload of freshly baked bread, all wrapped up, too, and was not able to give away a quarter of the entire load. Nine out of every ten persons would refuse to accept a loaf when it was handed to them.

Presence of Mind

He was boring her to tears when in came her dog. "Ah," he exclaimed, "have you taught him any more tricks since I was here last?"

"Yes," she said sweetly, "if you whistle he will bring your hat."—London Chronicle.

Just Keeps on Going

Joe—"Doesn't it upset you when you run over a pedestrian?" Lee—"No, I've never hit one as big as all that."

New Idea in Appeal for Hospital Funds

Letters sent by Sir Gerald du Maurier, in behalf of the Charing Cross Hospital fund attracted much attention in Paris and brought good response recently. Addressed personally to the recipient, the communication opens with a disclaimer of any intent to blackmail—"but unless you immediately send the donation which you have never promised to the Charing Cross hospital, I shall never bother you again," it adds. Then it continues, "What is wanted is a mere $50,000. I am not asking you personally for that amount, as I know what expenses are these days, but—" The letter ends, "I dare say you will think this letter a great impertinence—I have written many such and been savagely assaulted, but what of that? On the other hand I have received quite a lot of money from angelic people."—London Mail.

A Compromise

"How shall I ever meet my obligations?" groaned the bankrupt.

"Meet them half-way," suggested his legal adviser. And thereupon he made a 50 per cent assignment.—Boston Transcript.

One has the right to ostentatiously flaunt his moneyed luxury, but it is poor judgment.

Legal Wrangle in Sight

After Valentine Christ was jilted by his sweetheart more than half a century ago he secluded himself in a dilapidated old house in Cleveland, Ohio, and was rarely seen except when making a real estate deal. At his death in 1910 a purported will left his fortune of $2,000,000 to John Christ and Mrs. Martha Dambach, his brother and sister, but did not mention a second brother, Adam Christ, who broke the will and received a third share. Recently a second will, yellowed with age, was found in the attic of Valentine Christ's old home, leaving his entire fortune to his brother John. If this will is upheld by the courts it will mean a redivision of approximately $25,000,000 worth of property to the heirs of John Christ—and the lawyers.—Capper's Weekly.

A suit has been filed in the superior court here by John Schelling against Sam Enten, high school student and his parents. Mr. and Mrs. Ely Enten, seeking the recovery of $25,448, alleged damages, resulting from an automobile accident. The accident occured in October, when it is charged that Enten ran over the plaintiff, who was standing in front of the Fat Boy Barbeque on the highway. The complaint alleges that the plaintiff was knocked down by Enten's machine which passed over him, resulting in the fracture of one leg and of his jaw.

Fruit Men Claim Too Many Bananas

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, March 1 — "Yes, we have too many bananas" is the agricultural chorus led by G. H. Hecke, director of the State Department of Agriculture, acting in behalf of California fruit producers.

The peach men, it seems, have "peached" that the bananas is too popular, with over 58,000,000 bunches imported in 1927, and threatens to put their sunkist fruits out of the running.

"Yes, we have cheap labor bananas", the farmers carry on the refrain, demanding a tariff to be levied against the soft southern delicacy.

The American Pomological Society has asked Hecke to head a commitee proposing a protective tariff against bananas.

In order to give the people of the district an opportunity to see what the girls are doing in athletic sports, a girls' volleyball night will be held in the Sequoia Union High School gymnasium this Friday evening, March 2, at 7:30, featuring a volleyball game between Sequoia Girls Clubs II and III. In addition to this game, which promises to be very exciting, there will be a volleyball game between Clubs IV and I.

Sequoia Band to Enter State-wide Contest

The Sequoia Union High School band, under the direction of Max Gelber, band and orchestra instructor at the high school, will participate in a state-wide contest to be held in the Civic Auditorium, San Francisco during the first week of May. High school bands from all over the state will take part and the winners will go to Joliet, Illinois, to enter in the national contest three weeks later.

According to the rules of the contest, one of the pieces to be played in the preliminaries is assigned to each band so that they may practice and learn it; another must be selected from a suggested list of twenty pieces, and the third one is to be played at sight, that is, the music is given to the player just one minute before it must be played. At the conclusion all the contesting bands, probably conisting of about two or three thousand students, will play together.

Lamb Losses Lessened By Better Housing

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, March 1 — "Pigs in the parlor" have given way in these modern sanitary days to "pigs in the hospital," according to Dr. J. P. Iverson, chief of the State Division of Animal Industry.

If Mary's little lamb hasn't Mary he at least has a male nurse who furnishes a cotton waterproof coat to be worn after shearing to keep him dry in bad weather, Iverson points out.

And a circus tent is provided as a maternity hospital in lambing time, the animal expert says.

The star-boarder should appreciate this care given to ewes and lambs, Iverson asserts, because it has cut-down one-third the lamb loss and has insured lamb chops at a moderate price.

New "Y" Club Formed Here

On Tuesday afternoon of this week at 4:30 a new Pioneer Club will be organized by the Y. M. C. A. This club will be known as the Lincoln Pioneer Club. A. program none of them are limited to boys who have completed the work of the Friendly Indian program which is for boys 9 to 12 years of age.

Boys of Redwood City who are eligbile for charter membership are Billy Dusel, Wilbur Woodhams, Harol Kniveton, Joe and Harry Southward. Several other boys will be elegible within the next month or two.

This club will meet at the Lincoln school.

Drunk Drivers Detained At Sobering Station

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, March 1 — If you must get drunk, the state, it was announced today, will officiate at the "soberingup" process.

At least the state will do the job if you chance to be driving a machine in the vicinity of San Diego for a "sobering up" station is now maintained there by the State Division of Motor Vehicles for the benefit of visitors returning from Tijuana.

This station, first created by San Diego county, is maintained to prevent intoxicated autoists from driving until they snap out of it.

If you happen to be interested in the government's sobering-up formula, the law requires that you make application in person at San Diego.

WOODSIDE

New Groceteria Opens at Woodside

Saturday will mark the opening of the Woodside Groceteria in connection with the live Oak Market at Woodside. The new store is being opened by C. Mang, formerly owner of the Sequoia Market in Redwood City. It is planned by the proprietor to sell at very low prices by reason of a plan of cash and carry selling.

Charles Rayner for forty years one of the leading merchants of Shanghai, China, and prominent in the English colony there, having purchased the Lawson place on the La Honda road, is building himself a $60,000 residence on the property. The former residence has been razed and the new home will occupy the same site. Mr. Weeden of Menlo Park is the builder.

Extensive building operations are also in evidence at the Roth place, including additions to the home place and the construction of a new twelve car garage.

It is expected that construction will begin at both the Hammond and Mein places by the last of March if the weather permits. Altogether, Woodside should see unusual activity in the building line this spring.

The meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association held on Thursday afternoon was devoted to the subject of "Music in the Rural School." Mrs. Huebner, musical director at Las Lomitas, was the principal speaker. Tea was served by the local troop of Girl Scouts.

Louis Bellmont and family have moved from the historic "dobe corner' to the Merrill place on the Woodside grade.

The Friendly Indians, under the leadership of Roy Hohberger, will stage a buffalo hunt at the Bear Gulch property on Saturday afternoon.
